

My name is Raymond He, and I am a Ph.D. in Economics candidate at the University of Texas at Austin. I will be on the academic job market in Fall 2026. My research interests are in computational economics, labor economics, and sovereign debt. I am motivated by policy-relevant research questions, and I aim to use cutting-edge computational methods and novel data to comprehensively understand macroeconomic trends and market outcomes.